

Product information - stoneware

Stuff Design have designed a completely unique range of hardburned stoneware with an amazing reactive glaze

In this range we have the products: DE-20121, DE-20127, DE-20135, DE-20208, DE-20211, DE-20213 og DE-20220.

And consist of a range of dinner plates and bowls in different sizes.

This range is handmade in Portugal and have an exclusive and raw look

For the production of these exciting products we have used red clay, which give the products a more heavy and raw handmade look. The use of red clay also make the products very durable in use.

The glaze used is what you call a reactive glaze, which is a type of glaze that reacts very much when they are burned in the kiln, and therefore it develops a beautiful variation in colour and look.

Therefore not two items are the same, and there will be large variation in colour and look in the products, but this is exactly what make this range so unique.

The fact that the products are produced in Portugal make them more environment friendly than if they where transported from Far East to Europe. Also the factories in Portugal have more focus on green production than the factories in Far East. So this is a unique European produced product - at very commercial prices.
